AMERICAN HOPE

Jameson, Jady, and Kenyon are Atlanta's country boy band.

They picked up guitars when they were all 2 years old and began singing together on stage at just 4, 5, and 6 years old! Just a few years later they began writing their own songs. And now, years of growing up singing and playing music together has resulted in tight-knit harmonies and their own unique country music sound! They are influenced by groups such as Alabama, the Zac Brown Band and Florida Georgia Line. And the result is a fresh southern rock thumbprint all their own!

Over the past 9 years, American Hope has performed on stages across the southeastern states, and further to Texas and Ohio. From regularly sharing the stage with Randy Owen ("Alabama") at his popular "Fandemonium" events in Fort Payne, Alabama, to playing the main stage at the historic Atlanta Dogwood Festival, Jameson, Jady and Kenyon have become one of the best up and coming country music bands in the industry!
